Microcins represent potential alternatives to conventional antibiotics for human and veterinary medicine. For them to be applied in this manner, however, we need to better understand their spectrum of activity, how these proteins interact with susceptible cells, and how producer cells are protected against the antimicrobial properties of the microcins.

Spark testing is a method of determining the general classification of ferrous materials. It normally entails taking a piece of metal, usually scrap, and applying it to a grinding wheel in order to observe the sparks emitted. These sparks can be compared to a chart or to sparks from a known test sample to determine the classification.
